About Our Towns

This area is a treasure chest of historical sites evoking the charm of the past, most notably Washington Crossing Historic Park, and features rolling farm vistas, bustling quaint downtowns (recently named in top 10 small towns in Pennsylvania), canals, rivers and lakes as well.

Listed below are possible locations to consider. Some may be obvious, others not. Many of these locations are among the top pages viewed on the Visit Bucks County website. Painters are expected to respect private property and, if painting street scenes, to ensure pedestrians have sufficient room to pass safely.

Yardley Borough, Lower Makefield Township and Washington Crossing Historic Park

Yardley was founded by William Yardley, who emigrated to America in July 1682 with his family. He made an agreement with William Penn, before leaving England, to buy 500 acres (2.0 km²) for ten pounds. A survey was completed in October 1682, and the area William Yardley settled was called "Prospect Farm." It was located just outside the present Yardley Borough. A nephew, Thomas Yardley, came to America in 1704 to settle the estate and never returned to England. He opened a ferry line which started operating in 1710.

Newtown Borough and Newtown Township

Newtown was founded by William Penn in 1684. Newtown was one of several towns that Penn had organized around Philadelphia to provide country homes for city residents and to support farming communities. It was the county seat of Bucks County from 1726 until 1813, when it was replaced by a more central Doylestown. After his December 26, 1776 morning march to Trenton, and before the Battle of Princeton, General George Washington made his headquarters in Newtown. Newtown was incorporated on April 16, 1838 and has been enlarged three times since. In 1969 Newtown's entire central business district was placed on the National Register of Historic Places. This designation was largely due to Newtown's historic clock tower. Newtown is enhanced by unique boutiques, colleges, cuisine, a climate for industry, Pennsylvania's most popular state park (Tyler State Park) and a Heritage Walk that traces the very steps of George Washington.

Langhorne

Langhorne is used for Langhorne Borough but it is also used broadly to describe the majority of surrounding Middletown Township. Langhorne was founded in 1730 at the intersection of older Lenni-Lenape paths. The earliest established settlers (three Dutch and two British) arrived in the early 18th century. One of the area's first notable residents was Joseph Richardson, who established a store and inn in the 1730s. The road from Bristol grew into a very important transportation center between Trenton and Philadelphia in the later 18th century and 19th centuries, with trade and travelers contributing to the economic growth of the area. Langhorne eventually became the stagecoach transportation hub of Bucks County, transporting people between Trenton and Philadelphia.

New for 2023 - Historic Fallsington

Historic Fallsington, Inc. is a non-profit organization dedicated to the preservation of this historic village since 1953. Over nearly seven decades they have worked in close harmony with their neighbors to balance the interests and needs of the community with the vital task of caring for the 6 historic buildings and thousands of unique artifacts entrusted to their care. Listed as an Historic District on the National Register of Historic Places, they are proud of the long and varied history of the historic village and its people.

Some information about their historic buildings is noted below and highlighted on the map:

1. Gillingham Store/HFI Office & Information Center, c1910: This Italianate-style building functioned as a general store and post office for many years. Today it is the location of the Museum Shop and office of Historic Fallsington, Inc. and the Fallsington Antique and Craft Shop.
2. Burges-Lippincott house, 1808-1824: Boasting one of the most beautiful doorways in Bucks County, this house was built for the Lippincott family. In 1829, Dr. Henry Lippincott moved back into his family home and for the next 38 years tended to the medical needs of the village residents and nearby farming families.
3. Gambrel Roof house, 1728-1789 (Private): Originally built as a meetinghouse by the Falls Friend Meeting until they sold the property in 1789. Over the centuries, the building served as a boarding school, country store, library, dental office, and rental property.
4. Schoolmaster's house, 1758 (Private): A stone residence built by the Falls Friends Meeting for its schoolmaster.
5. Stagecoach Tavern, c1760s: This stone house was first licensed as a tavern in 1799 and served the community as such until 1920. It then served as a post office, lodge hall, and hardware store until acquired by HFI in 1967.
6. Moon-Williamson log house, 1767-1780s: This is one of the oldest log houses still standing on its original foundation as built for a well-known "joiner" and chair maker,

Samuel Moon and his family. In the 1870s the house was “Victorianized” by Miss Mary Williamson for use during her summers in the village.
